Brrrr! Welcome to the Ice Age! In North America, giant mastodons roamed through forests and across grasslands. It’s amazing to think that these giant elephant-like creatures—and their cousins the woolly mammoths—lived here until only 10,000 years ago. And so did people! They were all neighbors in this ice age world. Think about the animals you see in North America today. Life sure does change over time!
Did you know?

Skeletons of mastodons are found all over North America.
ICE AGE PALS!

Meet my friends from the Quaternary Period! Here is Truman the mastodon, Felix the saber-toothed cat, Sparky the dire wolf, and FitzRoy the giant ground sloth. There are SEVEN differences in the two pictures below. Can you find and circle all seven?
